

Skills for Care Workforce Wellbeing

Offer Update Feb 21

The wellbeing of our sector continues to be an area of concern and support for the workforce is one of our key priorities at this time. Here's an update on our recent wellbeing activity.

NEW: Workforce Wellbeing Resource Finder

We've launched this new easy tool to help the social care workforce find trusted resources to support their own or others well-being. We know there's a vast amount of resources, support and help available that can be overwhelming to navigate.

Our Workforce Wellbeing Resource Finder holds a selection of different resources suited to social care from our national trusted partners.

Whether you're looking for self-help, support for others, needing someone to talk in confidence or mental health support, there's an easy filtering system that gives the user several choices to help find something relevant. We hope this will help reduce time and energy searching for resources and there's an option to save and print your results.

The Finder will be enhanced over time following user feedback and we'll regularly update the content. We're really interested in hearing what resources work well and why. Tell us what you've found useful at policy@skillsforcare.org.uk

Remember, most areas are developing a local wellbeing offer. Find out more by contacting your Skills for Care locality manager or your local authority.

Our Wellbeing Webpage

We've collated our wellbeing offer where you can find links to sources of support from Skills for Care including our wellbeing offer to registered managers and the new bite size guide Wellbeing for registered managers, support for the diverse workforce and for individual employers and personal assistants. We'll be sharing wellbeing sector stories here in the coming weeks.

National Wellbeing Strategic Steering Group

We continue to meet monthly with our strategic partners to focus on our shared purpose to place workforce wellbeing at the heart of the sector, during the crisis and beyond. Short term priorities include raising the profile and take-up of local and national wellbeing offers with providers and partners and sharing sector stories.
